

Profile and personal description

Eben Louw is a health psychologist, systemic therapist and counsellor, specialist consultant in psychotraumatology, supervisor, couples therapist, supervisor and coach. Founder and managing director of evolve now | Supervision | Counselling | Training

He divides his time between clinical practice, counselling, training, consulting, and writing. For over a decade, he had been training coaching and supervising healthcare professionals, counsellors, advisors, and support workers in hate crime victim support and anti-discrimination advice. He also works as a lecturer within Higher Education Institutions.

Eben Louw has worked for several years as a project manager and consultant with victims of racist violence and in anti-discrimination counselling. After training as a systemic therapist and consultant, he immersed himself in further therapeutic methods such as ACT and emotion-focused therapy, as well as systemic supervision.

For over 10 years, he has worked as a supervisor, consultant, lecturer, trainer and coach in the psychosocial field and in various counselling contexts with non-profit organisations, counselling centres, psychosocial institutions and in Higher Education.
